

“Why Worthington is a Great Place to Live”

Before high school, I moved to Worthington from another suburb of Columbus. It was such a dramatic change from what I was used to. The other suburb was not a very good area; the neighborhood was not safe and the school system was definitely not good, either. I was afraid to go out at night. At school, I was the only Asian student. I was so glad when my mom decided to move into the Worthington area, where I felt safe and at home. The first thing I noticed when I first moved to Worthington was the neighbors: they were very friendly and helpful. Besides the nice neighbors, Worthington also has an impressive school system. Out of all of the schools I have attended in New York City, Georgia, and Ohio, I can say that Worthington schools are the best. I feel like I belong at Thomas Worthington, and I am proud to say that I'm a Cardinal. Worthington has everything a person need to feel at home: friendly neighborhoods, excellent schools, a low crime rate, access to park and recreation, and people from many parts of the world. To me, Worthington has got it all, and I am grateful to live here.
